Objective of the Program	The objective of the International Day of Radiology 2025 is to promote awareness about the vital role of medical imaging in modern healthcare. It aims to educate the public and professionals on the importance of safe and accurate diagnostic practices. The event celebrates the contributions of radiology professionals to patient care and medical advancement. It also encourages innovation, research, and global collaboration in the field of radiological sciences.

Detailed Report of the program

The Department of Radiology organized a Radiology Quiz on November 8, 2025, to celebrate the International Day of Radiology. The session began with a brief introduction about the significance of the day and the pivotal role of radiology in patient care and medical research.

The quiz was hosted by Dr. Arul Jabez, who conducted the event with enthusiasm and maintained an engaging environment throughout. The quiz included multiple rounds covering various domains of radiology such as imaging techniques, anatomy, radiological diagnosis, radiation safety, and recent advances in the field.

A total of 10 postgraduate students participated in the competition. The participants showcased excellent knowledge and enthusiasm, making the session both competitive and educational.

Following the quiz, a post-quiz discussion was held, where the quiz questions and answers were reviewed and discussed in detail. The discussion provided valuable insights into the rationale behind each answer, clarified doubts, and reinforced important radiological concepts. Dr. Arul Jabez actively interacted with the students, emphasizing the clinical relevance of the questions and encouraging analytical thinking.
